Which cupping apparatus to buy?

Bamboo cups are not suitable for a busy clinic due to sterilisation issue. For personal use however, one can use bamboo cups without any fear of causing cross infection. Glass cupping sets are the most commonly used apparatus. Generally speaking small cups are used when treating bony parts of the body or when treating the joint complaints. Pistol-handled cupping set is an ideal set for the beginners of cupping therapy; it gives you a complete control over the strength of the suction. It is particularly suitable when treating children. One disadvantage is that the application is "Cold", which means that this type of cupping is more suitable for "Hot" type complaints and not the "Cold" type conditions where warmth is necessary. Rubber cups are more suitable when "Moving cupping" technique is employed; it glides smoothly without causing much discomfort to the patient. A good clinic should have a selection of different cupping sets which will give the practitioner a choice during the treatment.
